Although he was considering law school after college, Jeff took one year off to work as a staffing consultant. The energy and passion of the business grabbed him immediately and with 15 years in the business he has never looked back. Jeff co-founded both the contract placement division and Ambrion's consulting division. He currently oversees staff augmentation, consulting, and the training and development of Ambrion's candidates.

Jeff Moench left a national competitor and joined Ambrion in October of 2001 to start Ambrion's contract placement division. Jeff counts his biggest asset as the people who work at Ambrion. Jeff likes the challenge of working in a company that is small enough to be flexible and jump on opportunities, yet strong enough to make lasting commitments to clients.

Jeff has a Bachelor's Degree in International Business from Moorhead State University.

Jeff can provide expert commentary on:

- Setting up a business with a strong financial infrastructure
- Trends in the staffing industry
- Why companies should not use contract-for-hire
- When and how to hire financial consultants
- Management, coaching and motivating your employees
- Developing a winning infrastructure and efficiencies for recruiting
- Developing a plan to achieve your company's recruiting goals
- Connecting with Generation X and Y employees and candidates
- Career management for finance and accounting professionals
